Helping Hands

Crayon

It all began the day our teacher told us to trace our hands as the main theme of the picture. Once done, we were supposed to complete it by filling the background with our imagination. I wanted it to be the different and I felt it would be more interesting to draw little people in the background. I thought the two hands could be a symbol of help and friendship. It was tricky choosing the background. I wondered what would have been perfect, a blue sky over the little world of people or maybe something else? The figures of people took a while to come through because we had to use the crayons. The coloring and details on my hands in the picture were especially interesting to me. The picture took a few days to be completed in art class but I really loved this project.
